B. Curriculum (paras 4 and 10-19 of the 1974 Recommendation)

B1a. Please describe in which ways GCED and ESD are mainstreamed in school curricula. Indicate whether topics are taught as standalone subjects or are integrated into the curricula of other subjects. Explain whether GCED and/or ESD themes³ are mentioned explicitly or are inferred and what types or levels of education are covered.

The subject of civic education has been introduced as a compulsory subject in all primary and secondary schools under the name "Democracy and Human Rights" or "Civic Education", and through adapted activities it is also implemented in preschool institutions. The topics of global citizenship are integrated in the curricula in several subjects from the social field in primary schools. In secondary schools, the topics of global citizenship are integrated into a subject called "Democracy and Human Rights" or "Politics and Civil Society, Economy" or "Culture of Religions", and in certain administrative units, contents on the topic of global citizenship are integrated into the elective subject History of religions".

Contents on the topic of education for sustainable development are integrated into the following subjects in the curricula for primary education: grades 1-4 within the subject "My environment", in grade 5 within the subject "Nature", and from 6 to 9 classes within the subject "Biology". In secondary school curricula, the topics of education for sustainable development are integrated into the subject "Biology", but certain topics, such as sustainable consumption and production, can be integrated into other subjects. Topics of global citizenship and sustainable development can also be discussed in head teacher classes, and are an integral part of various extracurricular activities, including debate sections, environmental sections, and various actions (eg cleaning actions, paper collection for recycling, etc.).

When it comes to literature, there are ten titles, approved workbooks, textbooks, manuals, worksheets and exercise books for primary schools, gymnasiums and secondary technical and vocational schools in the 2020/2021 school year relating to democracy and human rights:

1. "Fundamentals of Democracy" textbook for grades 1-4 of primary school (Bosnian and Croatian language - Latin; Serbian language - Cyrillic), copyright "Center for Civic Education", "Civitas Bosnia and Herzegovina", 2000;
2. "Fundamentals of Democracy" worksheets for grades 1-4 of primary school (Bosnian and Croatian language - Latin; Serbian language - Cyrillic), copyright "Center for Civic Education", "Civitas Bosnia and Herzegovina", 2000.

In the Brčko District of BiH, civic education and education for sustainable development are included in the curricula of primary and secondary school subjects through regular subjects Democracy and Human Rights, Entrepreneurship and partly Art, optional subjects Life Skills and Attitudes and Ethics, as well as the head teacher classes. Sustainable development is partly represented in the curricula of Biology and Ecology.

In Childhood Education (grades 1-6), topics are integrated into the curricula of regular subjects.

Human rights education is systematically addressed through these subjects, and includes universal respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and thus contributes, inter alia, to the prevention of violations and abuse of human rights by providing knowledge, understanding and development of attitudes and behavior, empowering individuals to contribute to the construction and promotion of a universal culture of human rights. It includes equality and non-discrimination, the value of human rights, dignity, justice, inclusion and participation, and respect for human rights and freedoms.

It is important to emphasize that all subjects unite the educational dimension of student personality development so that within all subjects, more or less, advocate and address topics related to GCED and ESD.

B1b. Please provide examples of curricula in which GCED and/or ESD are mainstreamed and, where possible, web links to relevant documents.

C. Teacher education (including the training of trainers and educators) (paras 4 and 33-37 of the 1974 Recommendation)

C1a. Please describe in which ways GCED and ESD are mainstreamed in initial training and in continuing professional development of teachers, trainers and educators. Indicate whether all teachers, trainers and educators or only some are required to receive training to teach GCED and/or ESD.

Contents related to global citizenship are integrated into initial teacher education programs for social sciences (see answer to question B1a), while contents on sustainable development education are integrated into initial teacher education for science subjects (see answer to question B1a). When it comes to continuous professional development of teachers, many professional trainings are organized on the topics of global citizenship for teachers of all profiles, while the topic of education for sustainable development is more represented in professional training for teachers of certain profiles (eg biology teachers).

Pedagogical institutes in Bosnia and Herzegovina continuously organize and implement various types of professional development of teachers, professional associates and school management (seminars / webinars, round tables, advisory work, etc.). GCED and ESD topics are covered through various seminars attended by primary and secondary school teachers. Also, teachers are continuously individually and professionally improved within the direct work with students from GCED and ESD who are integrated in the current curricula.

Also, trainings from GCED or ESD are mandatory for those teachers who teach specific subjects in this field, and they did not have them at the universities. For example, teachers who want to teach Democracy and Human Rights in secondary schools, or Civic Education in primary schools, if they have not taken the subject in college must be trained to be able to teach the subject.

The Agency for Preschool, Primary and Secondary Education has prepared a document "Model for improving the system of continuous professional development of educators, teachers and professional associates in Bosnia and Herzegovina" which is intended for ministries of education and pedagogical institutes as a basis for drafting regulations in accordance with legal competencies.

C1b. Please provide examples of teacher training policies or curricula in which GCED and/or ESD are mainstreamed and, where possible, web links to relevant documents. If possible, include examples related to initial training and to continuing professional development.

In Bosnia and Herzegovina, there is a continuous professional development of teachers, both by pedagogical institutes and by various international governmental and non-governmental organizations.

In the past period, several projects were implemented that included professional development of a large number of primary and secondary school teachers in the following topics: Education for Peace, Inclusive Education, Violence Prevention, Education for Social Justice, Inclusion Index, Life Skills Development, etc.

Some of the above topics are planned and implemented within the Annual Work Program of the school (peace week, violence prevention, protection of children's rights...)

Students are assessed in the subjects Democracy and Human Rights, Entrepreneurship, Life Skills and Attitudes, Ethics Based on Knowledge, Skills, Values and Attitudes / Behaviors. Assessment of students in primary schools is performed on the basis of the Ordinance on the advancement, evaluation and assessment of primary school students and the Ordinance on the promotion, evaluation and assessment of secondary school students.

⁵ Refer to the schema in paragraph 11 of Section II of these guidelines.

F. Technical and vocational education and training (paras 25-29 of the 1974 Recommendation)

- F1 Please describe any major initiatives that have been undertaken to promote GCED and/or ESD in technical and vocational education and training. Describe briefly the outcomes and impact of such initiatives and provide examples of good practices.

The promotion of GCED and ESD is carried out within the valid curricula for gymnasiums, secondary vocational and technical schools, the contents of GCED and ESD are realized.

Certain directions of secondary vocational education lasting four years (eg secondary schools of economics) have general education subjects that integrate certain contents of GCED and / or ESD.

In secondary vocational education, as well as in general education, students attend Democracy and Human Rights and Entrepreneurship classes. Outcomes are the creation of civic awareness, respect for human rights, starting an entrepreneurship, etc. Examples of good practice are examining social problems and offering solutions through projects, as well as participation in various events such as fairs and the like.

Insight into the Annual Work Programs of Secondary Schools shows that at a large number of schools activities are implemented that advocate topics from GCED and ESD through the work of the Student Council, the work of the Parents' Council, the implementation of projects with the NGO sector, etc.

G. Adult education (para 30 of the 1974 Recommendation)

- G1 Please describe any major initiatives that have been undertaken to promote GCED and/or ESD in adult education and other forms of non-formal education including youth education, out-of-school education, etc. Describe briefly the outcomes and impact of such initiatives and provide examples of good practices.

H. Research and International Co-operation (paras 41-45 of the 1974 Recommendation)

H1 Please describe what kinds of research or experimentation have been carried out to improve the implementation of GCED and/or ESD. Describe briefly how the results of such activities have influenced education policies, curricula and/or teaching practices.
